1. This action is responsive to the amendment filed on February 27, 2002. Claims 1-2, 5-6, 10, 13-14 were amended. Claims 33-36 are newly added. Claims 1-36 are pending. Claims 1-36 represent method and apparatus for managing address translations for replicated files in a network.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.
- 3. Claims 1, 33, and 36 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Osaku et al., U.S. Patent No. 6,061,738.

Osaku teaches the invention as claimed including a method and system for accessing information on a network using message aliasing functions having shadow call back functions (see abstract).

As to claim 1, Osaku teaches a method of communication between a client computer and a server computer connected to the client computer by a communications network, the method comprising the steps of:

- (a) receiving, at the client, a user's selection of a hyperlink that is a logical point of access to a file, the logical point of access being associated with a logical reference in a parent file, the logical reference uniquely identifying the file independently of an electronic address at which the file is located (see figs. 1, 22-27; col. 5, lines 10-35; col. 20, lines 35-65; col. 23-24; Osaku teaches converting a logical reference to a physical address using a database of correspondence between logical and physical addresses, the database at the client represents the parent file since by definition, a database may be a single file containing many records);
- (b) identifying an electronic address corresponding to the logical reference (see col.23, lines 5-15, Osaku teaches that the URL address represented by the serial number is identified and returned to client); and

(c) receiving, at the client, the file identified by the logical reference (see col. 5, lines 25-30; col. 24, lines 50-65).

As to claims 33, and 36, Osaku teaches a method of communicating between a client computer and a server computer connected to the client computer by a communications network, the method comprising the steps of:

- a) detecting a user's selection of a parent file's hyperlink to a desired file (see figs. 1, 22-27; col. 5, lines 10-35; col. 20, lines 35-65; col. 23-24; Osaku teaches converting a logical reference to a physical address using a database of correspondence between logical and physical addresses, the database at the client represents the parent file since by definition, a database may be a single file containing many records); and b) if the hyperlink is associated with a logical reference of the parent file of the parent file that identifies the desired file independently of a URL, identifying an electronic address stored in the parent file that corresponds to the logical reference see col.23, lines 5-15, Osaku teaches that the URL address represented by the serial number is identified and returned to client).
- 4. Claims 2-9, 34-35 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
- 5. Claims 10-32 are allowed.

The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

the prior art fails to teach or define singly or in combination the claimed limitations of associating several electronic addresses to a single logical address, and a server selection program included in a parent file as in claims 10-32.

6. Applicant's arguments filed February 27, 2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Application/Control Number: 09/328,657

Art Unit: 2154

In the remarks, the applicant argues in substance that the limitation of a parent file is not disclosed in the Osaku reference.

In response, the Osaku reference teaches a database containing correspondence between logical and physical addresses that can be located at the client or at the server and can be downloaded or installed at the client (see figs. 1, 22-27; col. 22-24). The database at the client represents the parent file since by definition, a database may be a single file containing many records.

Arguments directed to claims other than claim 1 are mute in view of the new grounds of rejection made in this action.
